

Build for the Sky!

A 2006 SWC Game

Do not open the sack of building material until the whistle blows.

Your goal is build the tallest freestanding tower (with its base on the floor) that you can by using only the materials provided in your sack within the time limit of 15 minutes. (For the hyper analytical, “freestanding” means “standing independently of anything else, standing apart, not attached to or supported by anything else.”) Your tower has to be freestanding when it is measured.

Do not start until a staff member blows a single whistle blast that signifies you are to open your sack of building materials and begin. You have 15 minutes to construct your skyscraper. You will be notified when 30 seconds of your time remains. You must stop construction immediately when a double blast of the whistle signifies your time is up.

If you are ready to have your tower measured before your time is up, give your patrol cheer and your tower will be measured then. Otherwise, at the end of the game a staff member will measure the height of your tower so it must stay standing until it is measured.

No tools or materials are to be used except for your pocketknife and the items provided by SWC staff for this game.

Before leaving the game site, put your tower and all leftover material that you don't want to keep as souvenirs back in the sack and then in the trash receptacle provided.
